FIVE ARE INJURED BLOCK WIPED OUT BY COLMA BLAZE

Colma was visited by one of the most disastrous fires in its history last Sunday, five men being injured and property valued at $100,000 destroyed.

The disastrous blaze wiped out a block of valuable property, including an old landmark, the Enrico Biggio residence, which had but lately been remodeled; the factory of the American Box and Drum Company, containing auto trucks, machinery and other valuable property; a row of warehouses filled with farm produce; the Southern Pacific freight sheds, and the abandoned Biggio Amusement Park.

When the fire seemed to be out of control, the Colma fire department sent out a call for outside help. San Bruno, Daly City and San Francisco responded. The Southern Pacific rushed railroad locomotives to the scene of the fire to pump water from their tenders. Chief Charles Brennan accompanied the San Francisco fire apparatus.

Daly City supplied a great volume of water, and had a surplus of one million gallons left in the reservoir.

Chief J. J. Kennedy of Daly City announces that the water supply from Daly City was not shut off by his orders.

Nothing of the Biggio home was left but the stucco front and the side wall, and the entrance to the Biggio Pleasure Park.

When the wall of the building collapsed, Lieut. Charles Richter, of 12 Engine, San Francisco, and four of his men were trapped. The men jumped, but Lieut. Richter, standing on a ladder, was struck by a falling timber. He received a severely lacerated hand. Two Daly City firemen, Walter Harmon, and Thomas Hughes, received severe injuries when they leaped to the ground to escape a collapsing roof.

Walter Riccomi, husband of the former Miss Rose Biggio, who resided in the Biggio home, was severely burned when struck by a shower of embers.

The telephone service was disrupted as the flames destroyed the telephone poles.

The damage caused by the fire was estimated at approximately $100,000. Nothing is left but smouldering ruins of a once lovely home and thriving business section. The Southern Pacific depot was very badly scorched from the intense heat.

It has not been determined as to the origin of the fire, it being blamed either to a carelessly thrown cigarette or faulty electric wires.

ASLEEP AT WHEEL; RUNS INTO HOUSE

That falling asleep at the wheel is bad business for the driver was demonstrated by Gerald Duane, of Stanford Court Hotel, Mayfield, on July 2 at 2:45 A. M. Duane became sleepy while driving through Daly City, and the next thing he knew his Flint touring car had crashed into a house at 6610 Mission street, after going over the sidewalk, the long porch-like entrance to the home being badly damaged. The machine turned completely over in a vacant lot after it had crashed into the house.

Duane said he fell asleep at the wheel and the next thing he knew the machine was crashing into the house. He escaped injury, but was placed under arrest on a charge of reckless driving.

HOME COMFORTS AND CONVENIENCE

The advancement which has taken place during the past fifty years has affected everything about us. But nowhere has the transformation been greater than in the American home. A comparison of our modern homes here in Daly City with the homes of fifty years ago—yes, even twenty-five years ago—causes one to wonder where our parents and grandparents found any comfort in their homes.

Today we enjoy those many comforts that have been given us through the discovery and development of electricity. We enjoy complete protection from the cold through insulation and modern heating systems. We have been able to take the hours of drudgery out of the lives of our housewives through the development of mechanical devices which have become indispensable to the modern home. Indeed, there is a tremendous change in the home of today, hot and cold running water, hardwood floors, cedar lined linen closets, breakfast nooks, tasteful pictures and hangings, color everywhere. Contrast our modern interiors with the gingerbread work and curious nicknacks the family of yesteryear had to cherish with a feather duster. The albums and queer things under glass and the mantel ornaments that were supposed to give an aesthetic air to the home! In those days there were certain rooms which must not be entered at all except on state occasions. The doors were kept locked and the curtains drawn so the light would not fade carpets and wallpaper. Every spring and fall a general house-cleaning of several days duration was necessary, causing a semi-annual upheaval dreaded by all.

What a difference in the uncluttered, cheerful, LIVED-IN homes of today. The dank museum that was known as the front parlor has been banished entirely. The big dining room with its massive furniture and plate-racks and portraits of fish and fowl has gone with it. In many homes the spare bedroom has been dispensed with, for there are now wall beds and day beds, and davenports, that can be made ready in a moment for the occasional guest.

The modern living room is all that the name implies. It is the gathering place of the family. Here you will find books and music and games, and the most comfortable furniture. It is the very heart of the home.

Money that was once spent for unused rooms and unneeded furniture is now invested in features that add to the livableness of the home. Home is the place to come to when we are tired. It should be a place of such peace and comfort that all worldly cares are forgotten within its walls. It should be the haven of the spirit, the place where the sweetest memories of life are formed. A place so dear, so worth while, that our young folks, growing up and going out to make homes of their own, will want to bring to their new homes the spirit that pervades the old.

Are you giving your children that kind of a home? Are you teaching them the quality of discrimination they learn so easily in the right home environment—the appreciation of good music, good pictures, the care of nice things, all the niceties of modern living?

If your home is not up to modern standards, then it should be your ideal to make it so. The study of home furnishing and decoration is fascinating, and the rewards of its application are many—more comfort and beauty in our daily lives and in addition, the pride of having done something to make the world a better place to li...

"What a charming place, Will!" she exclaimed, as they came out on a upper floor and into the room with th walls crowded with brass and met relief work. Crowded, small, dar tables were set with colored linen ru ners. At every table there wer women smoking, and throughout th room a sprinkling of men who looke strange to Ernestine. They had a fo eign sophisticated air. They were no at all like papa or Loring.

They ordered pastry and coffee and sat leaning forward on their elbows looking at each other, smiling, remembering.

"But how about your brace?" she asked him. "Were you able to discard it at thirteen, as you expected?"

"Sooner. But walking without it was a staggering business for a year or so, I can tell. I'll never be a golf champion, and the American army had to go to France without me, but I'm well, really. I never think of it any more. It's such a darned interesting old world to kick around in, without wanting to play tennis. I work on the Sun, and often go home after two

Leon Potter, of 450 Jones street, while riding a Harley Davidson motorcycle, received injuries from a collision with a Ford sedan driven by Frank McGue, of 599 Templeton avenue, on July 5, at 9:10 P. M., which landed Potter in the South San Francisco hospital. The accident occurred at Templeton avenue and Mission street. Potter was hit by the handlebars and thrown from his motorcycle, receiving possible internal injuries. His motorcycle was taken to a Daly City garage.

STREET CAR CONDUCTOR VICTIM OF FREAK ACCIDENT

Ernest W. Simpson, 30, of San Bruno, conductor on a Market Street Railway car, is dead as the result of a freak accident. Simpson was struck by the tolley of a passing car when he leaned from the car on which he was riding, his skull being fractured. He died at the Emergency hospital.

EAGLES' THEATRE PARTY

The Colma-Vista Grande Eagles are very busy preparing for their big theatre party, to be held in the newly altered Daly City Theatre on July 30. Two fine large printed signs may be seen in front of the theatre, announcing the coming event.

MOVE TO REOPEN MILLBRAE ROAD

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday ordered District Attorney Franklin Swart to take legal steps to compel the removal of a gate recently constructed across the Southern Pacific crossing at Millbrae. The resolution was offered by Supervisor Thomas Hickey, who told the board that there was no authority for the gate, in that the railroad commission has not yet ruled on the crossing matter. Supervisor Hickey explained that hundreds of citizens living in the vicinity of Millbrae had been inconvenienced by the construction of the gate. He said that it was now necessary either to cross at San Bruno or go all the way down to Broadway, Burlingame.

The question of safeguarding the crossing came up some time ago, and at that time the Southern Pacific maintained that the crossing was a private one, while Supervisor Hickey held that it was public. This phase of the issue is now before the railroad commission and has not yet been settled.

In the meantime, Supervisor Hickey says, the West Coast Porcelain Company, whose plant adjoins the crossing, and others erected the gate to keep the road from being used. He claims that this crossing has been over a public road for years and holds that its obstruction is illegal, especially in view of the fact that there has been no official ruling.

A county road has been constructed on either side of the railroad, and on the east side all the way to the Bayshore highway, providing a convenient connection for residents of the Millbrae and North Burlingame areas.

Residents of these sections have signified their intention of supporting Hickey and his fight to reopen the crossing and have it kept open.

SUSTAINS BROKEN ANKLE WHILE ENGAGED IN RACE

William Kabler, of Brunswick street, sustained a broken ankle while engaged in a foot race at the firemen's picnic, held at Lovchen Gardens on June 8. First and was given by the first aid members of Company No. 1, and he was taken to the French hospital, San Francisco. The following letter of thanks has been received by the firemen:

"Wililam Kabler, who broke his leg while running in the foot race last Thursday at the firemen's picnic, at Lovchen Gardens, wishes to thank the firemen who so proficiently and carefully aided him, and so perfectly and carefully splinted his ankle. It being their first emergency case they deserve all the praise and thanks of the people of Daly City. I certainly thank them all in behalf of my wife and myself. WILLIAM KABLER."

EAGLES' BOOSTER COMMITTEE MEET AT THE WARREN HOME

The booster committee of the Colma-Vista Grande Aerie of Eagles held their weekly meeting at the Harry Warren home on Risel street. At the conclusion of the meeting delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Warren.

The guests who enjoyed this hospitality were A. J. Bodien, William Bolger, Herbert Harper, Fred Collins, C. Williamson, Ed. Trier, J. G. Reardon, William Merritt, S. L. Harper, W. A. Green, Frank Greco, Ed. Heim, A. J. Dalton, Lamar Johnson, Harry Warren.

YOUNG BANKER TO WED THIS SATURDAY EVENING

Mr. and Mrs. J. Westley Guiles announce the marriage of their daughter Miss Roylla Valetta Guiles to Richard James Ennis, the ceremony to take place tomorrow, Saturday, July 12, at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church. Richard Ennis is well known and has a wide circle of friends who will wish him and the lady of his choice a happy voyage on the sea of matrimony. Mr. Ennis is employed at the Daly City branch of the Bank of Italy.

A surprise stork shower was given on Thursday, June 27, by the M. E. church Ladies' Aid in the home of Mrs. F. Darragh, 129 San Diego avenue, in honor of Mrs. R. Rothwell. The ladies present were Mrs. F. Rothwell, Mrs. Meeth, Mrs. Cashion, Mrs. O. Ginsberg, Mrs. King, Mrs. P. Williams, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Schmidt, Mrs. V. Johns, Mrs. J. Hay, Mrs. F. Hanson, Mrs. B. Hanson, Mrs. Haddon, Mrs. Traboski, Mrs. R. Glendening, Mrs. Setinbach, Mrs. Hodak, Mrs. L. Ginsberg, Miss Helen Ginsberg, Miss Verna Schmidt, Miss Jean Darragh. After opening many beautiful gifts which were showered upon Mrs. Rothwell, a luncheon was served.

PLAN ADDITION TO COUNTY HOSPITAL

The addition to the Community hospital at Beresford will cost the county $138,105, if low bids received last Monday by the county board of supervisors are accepted. The new wing to the hospital will provide among other things an isolation ward, a sun deck on the roof, a section for obstetrics, and quarters for nurses.

The total of the low bids is more than $10,000 less than the estimated cost of $150,000.

Six separate bids were submitted for as many phases of construction. The general contract low bid was in the sum of $82,442, which was submitted by Sorensen & Haggemark, San Francisco contractors; the low electric bid was offered by the Superior Electric Company for $10,143; plumbing, Scott Company, $19,767; heating, F. F. Klimm Company, $12,075; painting, George Ames, Burlingame, $3,890; elevator, Pacific Elevator Company, $6,530.

All low bidders, with the exception of Ames, were San Francisco concerns.

A. W. Deuel, general manager of the San Francisco-Hayward bridge, appeared before the board with a new schedule of rates designed to lessen the toll costs to motorists using the bridge for two-way trips. The lower rate provides that the motorist shall pay the present charge for one-way passage, but shall be given a ticket which will entitle him to return within three days at a flat rate of 50 cents. The present charge is 60 cents for the car and 10 cents additional for each occupant. If a car containing four people goes over the bridge they pay the regular rate of $1.00; however, they are given a ticket which will enable them to come back over the span within three days for 50 cents, thereby saving them 50 cents. The change in rates was approved by the board.

The supervisors ordered the construction of two traffic lights on Millbrae avenue, Millbrae.

A proposed ordinance said to have the backing of the San Mateo County Building Trades Council, governing sanitary conditions in buildings constructed in unincorporated areas, was delayed after considerable discussion.

NEW SAN MATEO TIMES PLANT OPEN TO PUBLIC

Horace Amphlett, publisher of the San Mateo Times, will no doubt long remember Monday, July 7. On that date the new building occupied by the Times plant was thrown open to the public, and a 68-page edition, the largese ever issued in the county, was presented for the approval of the residents of San Mateo county.

The Times is now housed in a splendid new building, the plant is all that could be desired, and the people of San Mateo should be proud of their daily newspaper and its progressive owner and publisher.

From 7 o'clock Monday evening until a late hour, throngs of visitors and well wishers passed through the new building, viewing the up-to-date equipment, and the flower bedecked rooms, and the general verdict seems to have been that Mr. Amphlett has provided San Mateo with a newspaper home and plant that would be a credit to a city many times the size of San Mateo. Hats off to Horace Amphlett and the San Mateo Times.

CROCKER P. T. A. STUDY CIRCLE

The study and serving circle of the Crocker P. T. A. met at the home of Mrs. G. I. Yates, on Rice street. An interesting article on corporal punishment of children was read by the circle leader, Mrs. Orvilla Pauw. Mrs. E. Boyle, one of the absent members, sent an interesting letter written from Atherton, where she is spending her vacation. This letter was read by Mrs. Pauw and was greatly enjoyed by the members. Mrs. Betty Cobb became a member at this meeting. After the intermission given to listen to these readings, sewing was again resumed until delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Yates, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Cummings. Those present were Mrs. J. Jordan, Mrs. S. Millhauser, Mrs. O. Pauw, Mrs. S. Tompsett, Mrs. W. Grantham, Mrs. J. Swan, Mrs. H. C. Cobb, Mrs. A. O'Neil, Mrs. E. Bolger, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. G. I. Yates, Miss Mae Swan, Miss Corinne Pauw, and Baby Betty Cobb.

Seeks Damages for Injury

John E. Kester has brought suit in Redwood City against James T. Yond for more than $5800 damages as the result of an automobile accident last May 10 at Daly City. Kester claims he was severely injured when Yond's automobile struck the motorcycle he was riding.

WESTERN PACIFIC COMING THIS WAY

Preliminary to the call for bids for the construction of the new $10,000,000 railroad extension which the Western Pacific will build northerly from Keddie, Cal., a station on the main line of the Western Pacific in the Feather River canyon, to Bieber, Lassen county, Cal., there to meet and connect with the Great Northern's southerly extension from Klamath Falls, Oregon, Colonel J. W. Williams, chief engineer of the Western Pacific, will conduct a party of leading general railroad construction contractors over the route of the new line, which will be 112 miles in length.

Colonel Williams and members of his staff, including T. L. Phillips, principal assistant engineer, R. A. Hollenbeck, construction engineer, and H. M. Smitten, bridge engineer, met the contractors at Redding, from which point the party was scheduled to leave by automobile for Bieber early yesterday morning.

At least four days will be required for the trip, which will be made in sections from Bieber south to Keddie. Night headquarters will be established while in the field, at Bognuda's ranch, near Bieber, and at Westwood. On account of the nature of the terrain, part of the inspection will be made on horseback. Including the engineers, the contractors and their associates, the party comprises about forty.

It is expected to award all of the work, except station and roadway buildings, in one contract which will include grading, tunneling, bridge construction, track laying and ballasting. The plan is to call for bids to be received about July 25.

Following is a brief, general description of the route which the Western Pacific extension from Keddie to Bieber will follow:

The extension will take off from the main line of the Western Pacific at Keddie in the Feather River canyon, and will run for eight miles northeasterly along Spanish Creek and Indian Creek to Crescent Mills, and thence for seven miles through Indian valley to Greenville.

The next ten miles is up Wolf Creek canyon to Wolf Creek summit, which is in view of Lake Almanor. The next fourteen miles is along the easterly side of Lake Almanor and Hamilton Creek to Westwood, where the lumber mills of the Red River Lumber Company are located.

Leaving Westwood, the line runs almost due north for a distance of about 39 miles, crossing Susan River and Pine Creek to Jelly Camp. From this point the line swings to the northeast for a distance of about 18 miles around Black Mountain on a descending grade to Little Valley (Bognuda's Ranch.)

Continuing on north for a distance of 13 miles it passes through Sunflower Valley and Clark's Valley over Spring Gulch and then crosses Pit River at the lower end of Big Valley. Thence it continues for a distance of three miles, to the joint terminal, near Bieber, with the Great Northern.

The line runs close to Lassen Volcanic National Park, being nine miles from the Park at the nearest point.

Abe was at a dance and lost a wallet containing $600. He got up on a chair and announced: "Gentlemen, I lost my pocketbook with $600 in it. To the man who finds it, I will give $50."

Voice from the rear: "I'll give $75." —Medley.

We really should celebrate two annual Thanksgiving days—the regular turkey day and the day Congress adjourns.

MOONEY PARDON DENIED BY YOUNG

Tom Mooney, perhaps America's most famous prisoner, was denied a pardon from San Quentin prison by Governor C. C. Young last Monday.

Mooney and Warren K. Billings are both serving life terms in prison for murder, on a charge of planting a bomb in a San Francisco Preparedness Day parade on July 22, 1916, which cost ten lives and maimed forty other persons.

Governor Young's action followed a recommendation by his pardon advisory board, opposing a pardon for Mooney, and a similar recomemndation by the California Supreme Court in Billings' case. Billings could only be pardoned by the governor with a majority recommendation of the Supreme Court under California's constitution and statutes.

As a result of Governor Young's decision, the only hope of Mooney and Billings for release from prison at this time is by parole.

"IT'S A WISE CHILD" COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE

The advent of a Belasco attraction in any community is invariably an usual event in theatricals. In San Francisco, the native heath of the dean of the American theatre, it takes on added importance. Mr. Belasco, true to his promise a year ago, when he sent "The Bachelor Father" to San Francisco and Los Angeles, that his Califorina should see at least one Belasco attraction each season, is sending his latest success, "It's a Wise Child," a comedy, by Laurence Johnson, to the Curran Theatre, Monday, July 21, for a limited engagement, following its run of one year at the Belasco Theatre, to capacity audiences.

"It's a Wise Child" deals with modern day American life and represents deftly and truly a situation any family might face—provided one member had the imagination and courage to say a certain seven magic words in an effort to escape from an undesirable situation. The comedy situations start at the rise of the curtain and before long everyone in the household is involved in the mixup. They no more than get out of one complication than they find themselves in another.

The comedy situations, under Mr. Belasco's delicate handling, are said to be laughable, naughty without overstepping the bounds of the conventions. Mildred McCoy, Sidney Toler, Minor Watson, Helen Lowell, Leila Bennett, Porter Hall, Harlan Briggs, Olga Krolow, Jos. Striker, and a capable company of supporting players, all contribute to the fun.

Even the weather man did his prettiest in giving the returning Byrd party a warm reception.

For the following reasons, we, the Undertakers of San Mateo County, are of the firm belief that an Undertaker should not hold the position of Coroner in any county:

(1). California has 40 Coroners who are Undertakers, and it is a well known and established fact that every one of these Coroners who are Undertakers, monopolize practically all the business coming out of their respective Coroners' offices.

(2). With two possible exceptions, Dr. J. C. McGovern is the only Coroner in the State of California who has had courage and fairness to distribute equally among every Undertaker (including the candidate who is opposing him) all business arising in their respective districts.

(3). DR. J. C. McGOVERN (WITH ONE EXCEPTION) IS THE ONLY CORONER IN THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA WHO HAS DEPUTIZED EVERY UNDERTAKER IN THE COUNTY, INCLUDING THE CANDIDATE WHO IS OPPOSING HIM, THEREBY MAKING THEM A PART OF THE CORONER'S OFFICE.

(4). Due to the equal distribution of the Deputy Coroners in San Mateo county, any emergency that may arise, day or night, in their respective districts, is adequately taken care of on a few moments notice.

(5). IF NO ONE UNDERTAKER HAS A MONOPOLY, RELATIVES OF THE DECEASED HAVE THEIR CHOICE OF ANY UNDERTAKER IN THE COUNTY, THEY ALL BEING DEPUTIES.

(6). Our faith in San Mateo county represents an investment of $250,000,000, subject to the usual taxes, which will be jeopardized if any one Undertaker is given a preference of any kind in the Coroner's office.

(7). With one exception, all the Undertakers of San Mateo county have lived in and paid taxes to the county of San Mateo for a period ranging from ten to sixty years.

For the above set out facts, we, the Undertakers of San Mateo County, do unqualifiedly endorse the retaining of Dr. J. C. McGovern in the office of Coroner of San Mateo county.

FILIPINO EXCLUSION DEMANDED BY LEGION

As the call went forth last Monday to the four hundred American Legion Posts of the state, State Adjutant James K. Fisk of the Legion declared that one of the big problems to be discussed by the Legionnaires at the annual state convention to be held at Sacramento, August 18-20, will be that of the Filipino immigration problem.

"Filipinos are arriving in California at the rate of 300 to 500 a month, and adding daily to the unemployment problem, not only among the veterans but among all others out of work, and we demand that something be done to met the situation which is confronting us," State Adjutant Fisk, a member of the California Joint Inmigration committee, declares.

The American Legion has already expressed itself on the Filipino immigration problem, and the stand of its officials will be reiterated in resolutions to be presented to the Sacramento convention, which promises to be one of the banner meetings in the American Legion's history. The big conclave will be held in the Sacramento Memorial Auditorium, and an extensive program of entertainment has been arranged by the Sacramento Legionnaires and citizens' committee.

In addition to outlining a program of work for the ensuing year and hearing of the accomplishments of the past, the Legionnaires will name a new commander and other officials.

One of the activities which will be dwelt upon at the convention, according to State Adjutant Fisk, is that of community service.

BIRTH RATE SHOWS LARGE DECREASE

In an average group of 200 Americans in 1915, five children were being born each year. In the same average group in 1928, less than four children were being born, says a dispatch from Washington, D. C. These figures are based on the returns from states embracing 91 per cent of the population, where the registration of birth is required by law. In 1915 the birth rate in the registration area was 25.1. In 1928 it was 19.7, a decrease of 5.4, or 21.5 per cent.

The result, says the office of education of the Department of the Interior, now is being felt in the schools. Actual decrease in the number of children in the lower grades in communities that are increasing in population are being shown.

In Chicago, for example, at the end of September, 1924, there were 260,872 children in the first six grades of the regular day schools. The corresponding figure for 1929 was 254,666, an actual decrease of 6,000.

In the nation there were 4,320,000 children in the first grade in 1920, while in 1926, with a population increase of 10 per cent, there were less than 4,000,000.

hot water—instantly, is a blessing!

Saves 4 to 6 hours each week

Happy days for the young people mean additional cares for mothers.

But plenty of hot water at the turn of the faucet washes away the trouble. Throughout the year too, it saves your time—by giving you hot water without delay, by quickly dissolving dirt and grease, by making it easy to keep things sweet and fragrant.

When men stop at hotels they like the hot water at a turn of the faucet—for bathing and shaving. It's this same service you bring to your home with an Automatic Gas Water Heater. Because of its insulated tank and efficiency, the cost is less per gallon to heat water with an Automatic Gas Water Heater than with the old-fashioned kinds of waiting for

Here we see Chicago with its fine families, its beautiful homes, its great buildings; and then we see its poverty, its tenements, its bootleggers and its gangsters. And thus it is a colorful panorama that makes a background for characters who are as vivid and real as the people you find every day about you.

When the daughter of a well-to-do family makes a runaway match with the carpenter's son, the family, naturally, objects. The theme is not new. It is a famous complication of real life which, in its various angles, has provided inspiration ever since poets began to sing and novelists to write.

This is a story of youth and love that is as new and refreshing as the first violet of spring, yet its problems are those which might have confronted a pair of lovers at the dawn of civilization; but in this case they are settled in a truly modern manner, with the advantages of decision which common sense, freedom of thought and freedom of action are supposed to confer.

Infidelity and the overstressed triangle are absent. Art is the only jealous mistress here. It has been the achievement of the author to write a real love story in which maid and man, husband and wife, through all their stress, even anger and possibly hatred, feel the dynamic current which steadily draws them one toward the other.

CHAPTER I

Call Me Up

Her life began to have meaning and importance the day that Ernestine met Will again on Michigan boulevard. She had not seen him since they were both children, and the attachment she had formed for him then was a pale plant beside that which sprang up in her now. She was so beguiled with Will, so in love with his long nervous person, his burning black eyes, and his bright exclamatory ways, that nothing mattered to her except that he love her. Lillian always contended that Ernestine could have stopped the whole affair in its beginnings, but it is more than likely that she was wrong.

At that time Ernestine was surfeited with safety. She felt in herself the beginnings of spiritual indigestions at the security and complacency of the Bricelands. At school she had discovered that there were worlds beyond worlds outside of her mother's. Her family's outspoken conviction that society began and ended in their own particular group was a conviction entirely unjustified by facts. The oasis, Sheridan Park, had become lost long since in the great activity of Chicago, and what the Bricelands considered "old family" was unknown among the really rich and powerful of the city, as well as among the newly rich and arrogant "gold coasters" of the North side.

Her schooling was finished when Ernestine was twenty. Lillian had been out of school a year and had already taken up the threads of the life outlined for them by mamma's connections. The sisters were congenial and fond of each other. At first Ernestine had been more than satisfied—she had been actively happy—just to be with her mother and Lillian again, with Grandmother Briceland and old friends in the big lovely house on Sheridan road. There was an endless parade of parties and dances and weddings.

But after a few months Ernestine decided that to be reared in an "old family" group on the North side of Chicago was almost as bad as being brought up in a little town. She knew everything that every one hoped or did. Some of the younger people were becoming definitely ambitious, and aligning themselves with the gold coasters, or making entry, through school connections, into the older and richer society of other cities. The Bricelands were inaccessible to the horde of apartment house dwellers who were moving into Buena and Sheridan Parks, and crowding the North Shore with glass-enclosed tenements. Mamma disregarded the invaders superbly and refused to join the northward movement out of Chicago or the southward movement downtown. She would stay where she was, and Lillian complained that her attitude not only protected her from climbers, but also prevented the family from doing any climbing of its own.

But Ernestine sympathized with her mother's loyalty to old associations. Ernestine herself was without social ambitions. She was established among intimate friends. She had only to be natural, casual, mocking, and it was enough. Ernestine knew a strange nostalgia. She wakened at night, filled with the need to use her gifts more actively.

And then, she met Will.

It had been twelve years since she had last seen him, but she knew him at once when she encountered him on Michigan boulevard one November afternoon after the Armistice. It was late afternoon, and the sky was thickening with dusk. Will stood with his shoulders against the great granite blocks of the library, looking out over the heads of other people, into the mysterious beauty of the clouds.

She stopped and looked at him, and her heart missed a beat lest this be some stranger who might respond too boldly to her stare. But she was sure it was Will. He did not see her at all, and his intense concentration confirmed her recognition of him. It was his old stare.

When she approached him and touched his arm, his glance came back from the clouds and rested on her face, and he smiled. His smile was charming. His whole countenance broke up into different lines and planes; his face seemed warmer, nearer.

"Hello, Ernestine," he said in a natural tone. "Did you get the bird book?"

She laughed with delight.

"Will Todd, you are incomparable." They were shaking hands now and laughing together. "To think that you remember me, after all this time. Ten years—no twelve! But—of course I got the bird book. I wrote and thanked you for it! Didn't you get my letter?"

She was conscious of many things. Of his clothes, which were all wrong, too bright and loud, each garment chosen without regard to the whole. He was too white, like a person always indoors, and though he was tall, he was not at all robust. Yet he gave a distinct impression of energy, mental rather than physical. He seemed to Ernestine to be positively electrical, the most alive person she had ever known.

He put his hand within her arm and turned her southward, so that they walked shoulder to shoulder.

"Nary a letter," he answered. "I see now why I have spent all these years misunderstanding you. And you wrote me! My heart was broken, when I was ten. I've never trusted a woman since."

She laughed at his nonsense, but with a certain catch at her throat. When she was eight years old he made a beautiful book of colored bird pictures for her and bound it. He had brought it from far out on the Northwest side of Chicago, where he lived, to her home in Sheridan Park. She had been at dancing school that afternoon, and had never seen him since.

"It seems dreadful that you should never have been thanked for the book. I wanted to go to see you again, but no one would take me. But I spent a whole month's allowance on a gorgeous box of stationery with a huge gold E on every page, and I wasted most of it before I had a letter perfect enough to send you."

"I'll never have it now," he said. "It isn't right."

"I suppose I didn't address it correctly. Somebody should have helped me. But let me thank you now for the book, Will. It was beautiful. I have always treasured it. It was the only thing I had given to me that the giver made with his own hands."

"Don't thank me yet," he said, drawing her into an entrance and pushing a gilded button for the elevator. "Take tea with me, and thank me, in detail, and with repetitions."

As they ascended in the elevator he gave her arm a little squeeze, she looked up at his bright smile and smiled in return, memories flooding over her. He had always smiled charmingly. When he was a child she thought it was because he was lame that he smiled so sweetly, but now, he was free from any impediment that she could see.

Ernestine recalled the carpenter's wagon at the stone carriage block of her mother's house. It was a bright green wagon, with a green and yellow striped umbrella over the driver's seat. Old Peter Todd, who worked for papa, had got down from this high seat and turned to help his son. He—Peter—had come to repanel the dining room for mamma. As the boy's mother wasn't well, he explained, he'd had to bring him. Ernestine had at once extricated the tall thin boy, with a metal brace on one foot, from behind his father. He liked her. Silent with every one else, he was gay and friendly with Ernestine. He had come with his father every day that summer, and they had played together from morning till night. How kind mamma had been to him! Ernestine wondered if mamma would be as kind now?

She had never had so nice a playmate. Perched perilously on the high wagon seat, she had gone home with him and his father. The tiny house in which he lived had seemed to her like the little house on the plains in the story of The Wonderful Wizard of Oz. He had given Ernestine a pine shingle with a rippling American flag painted on it; and, after she came back from the lake in August, he had brought her the bird book, a duplicate of one of his own that she had admired.

And she had never seen him again—nor thanked him!

"What a charming place, Will!" she exclaimed, as they came out on an upper floor and into the room with the walls crowded with brass and metal relief work. Crowded, small, dark tables were set with colored linen runners. At every table there were women smoking, and throughout the room a sprinkling of men who looked strange to Ernestine. They had a foreign sophisticated air. They were not at all like papa or Loring.

They ordered pastry and coffee and sat leaning forward on their elbows looking at each other, smiling, remembering.

"But how about your brace?" she asked him. "Were you able to discard it at thirteen, as you expected?"

"Sooner. But walking without it was a staggering business for a year or so, I can tell. I'll never be a golf champion, and the American army had to go to France without me, but I'm well, really. I never think of it any more. It's such a darned interesting old world to kick around in, without wanting to play tennis. I work on the Sun, and often go home after two in the morning. I come over here sometimes, when it's quiet except for a few cars. The streets echo, and the strangest feeling of unreality comes over me."

"What do you do, Will, on the Sun?"

His eyes shone. His voice thrilled with enthusiasm and excitement.

"I work in the art department," he told her, and the way he put it, it was a "brag," a superlative announcement. "I've been there over a year now, and, Ernestine, I'm crazy about it. Lord, it's wonderful, the feeling you get on a paper. I've made some fine friends. John Poole is a friend of mine, and a good one, too."

Every one in Chicago knew John Poole, whose comic strip in the Sun was as much a feature of Chicago life as the beauty of the Blackstone reared against a winter sky.

"Why, Will, how fine! But what do you draw?"

He hitched his chair a little nearer to hers in his eagerness.

"Did you ever see, in a newspaper, the little curlicues around a half-tone—that's a photograph—decorations to make the picture, which may be odd in shape, fit into the type? I do those things, and lettering, and sometimes a spread." He sent a waitress for a paper, and showed her what he did.

"I get twenty-five dollars a week for it," he boasted. "And I'd do it for nothing, if they didn't pay me. The fellows are real guys, and we've got a regular boss. This is my day off, and here I am downtown, and going over there, pretty soon. I can't stay away. If you'll go with me, I'll drag you around the plant, and show you the big presses, and introduce you the Mr. Poole, and the fellows in the art room."

She felt her horizon widening. What a world men lived in! Papa had his quarries, and Will his curlicues, and Loring his law! How wonderful to live in something, and for it! She felt that her own life was dim and futile. Now that she was out of school, she was expected to have a good time until she married. Will was the only man she knew outside the old familiar circle. How dull her interests were compared to his thrill over a twenty-five-dollar-a-week job.

"But, Will,"—she turned to him in such a manner that it seemed their faces would touch, drawn by the strong attraction that brought them so close—"I thought you were going to be a real artist."

"Ho," he said, "that's why I couldn't stand the Art institute! I want to be a cartoonist. I've discovered that you can do a whole lot more with a pencil line than make a petunia. I think you can make a line stand up and howl. You can make it do all sorts of things for you, caricature, design—nonsense. I don't want to be a color artist."

"But the birds you made for me, when you were only ten—the colors, and the way their heads bent—it's a beautiful book, Will. I showed it to my zoology teacher when I was in school, at Lake Forest, and he praised it. I wouldn't take anything for it."

Will brushed the birds aside impatiently.

"Kid stuff," he told her. "Have you seen these little shadow figures, just straight lines for body and limbs? You can get action into one of those things. Look here," He had been busy with a soft pencil on the edge of the stiff menu card, and he showed Ernestine now a sketch of a cat, sitting there looking at the fish list, licking his whiskers—a predatory hungry Tom. She laughed involuntarily, and her eyes filled with admiration.

"I see what you mean," she said. "It's a new kind of art, like jazz is a new kind of music. I know what you're trying to get at, and you do it, too. It's disrespectful though—don't you think?"

He was entranced with her understanding.

"Of course it's disrespectful," he said robustly. "Why not? I think the time has come for a little healthy disrespect. We'll show them."

He was very compelling. Ernestine's look of admiration was extravagant, and he was becoming a little drunk with it.

"I've done several column heads. You watch the first page of the second half of the Sun. I always put a little cat's head down in one corner of my stuff. We're not allowed to sign our things, but you can identify mine if you watch the paper. The fellows all encourage me, and my boss does, too."

He looked at her for a long moment and then exclaimed:

"Gosh, it's good to talk to you, Ernestine. You always did get right inside of my heart. I wasn't a bit surprised to see you. You may not believe me but all these years I've often thought I'd meet you. I never forgot that day you came to our house. I've often seen your shadow, sitting there in the kitchen eating bread and milk, and talking to mom. I remember I wanted to give you all my things—every one. You should have taken them. It would have made a lonely kid happy."

She was tender, remembering.

"I made an awful fuss because they dragged me to the lake that summer," she told him. "I wanted to stay in Chicago with you, and the practical difficulties of leaving a child behind did not interest me. We should have been together more. We were real friends."

"A boy never forgets kindness," he said soberly. "You were so good to me and always took my part."

"But, Will, you did something you never knew, for me. You told me one day a thing I've never forgotten. I thought your brace gave you a wonderful advantage, in the way of a lever to get your own will, and you scorned me for such a thought. It would be taking advantage, you said. I've never forgotten that. You were the one who taught me to be sporting."

The spell was cast. The mysterious bonds of spiritual understanding were forged.

"You're awf'ly pretty, Ernestine. You were a cute kid—but fat. I can remember what round cheeks you had. But now your cheeks slope down in that perfect line." He touched the line of her cheek with a tentative forefinger, then quickly withdrew his hand and flushed. "Dark eyes, dark hair and pale clear skin. What more could a girl want, unless it is such perfect bony structure? You'd be pretty anyway, dark or thin, or pale or flushed, because it's real—deep. Now you're blushing—and that gray coat." He laughed delightedly, and the deep color suffused Ernestine's cheeks at his personalities. But she was not displeased, only smiled at him.

"Aren't you glad we knew each other when we were kids?" he said to her. "It makes us seem so much closer now."

They swayed together and fell into a warm hypnotic silence. His little finger brushed her hand, as he knocked his ashes into the tray the waitress had placed for him, and at once they rose, talking and laughing artificially.

Ernestine felt the need to masquerade her bright joy in him. She was acting like a moon-struck high school girl, acting as though she had never talked to a man before. Well, she hadn't. Not like this, certainly. She had listened to plenty of them raving about themselves, and explaining the technicalities of football, but she had never taken part in such a satisfying conversation. But she dissembled as they left the tearoom and turned toward the newspaper plant.

It was dark now, and the streets were crowded with homegoing workers, so they instinctively drew close together. She asked after his mother in a formal tone.

"She'll never be well," he told her sorrowfully, and at once her sympathy drew them back into intimacy. He tried to put the conversation back into place.

"How's your pretty sister Lillian?"

She answered that Lillian was a beauty now, fair and slender and exquisite. A lady.

"She's going to marry Loring Hamilton, I guess," she said. "He's at the house a lot, as he's always been. He's awfully good to both of us, but Lillian's his choice. He's in his father's law office now. He inherited a nice practice. I believe he wants to be a judge. Don't you remember him?"

"A big blond boy? He was almost grown when we were kids. Yes, I remember him. He treated me with an air of weary patience. I hated him. He used to tease you and pull your hair. If he prefers Lillian, he's changed, for he always noticed you. I admit I was simply jealous. He had the run of the house, and I was an outsider and treated well only because I was a kid."

"Why, Will, that's not a bit nice of you to say," she protested, and he laughed good-naturedly. Both of them knew it was true.

"Is your mother just the same? She had such a pleasant voice, but she was bossy. Kind of a queen. I admired her tremendously. She fitted entirely my juvenile notions of a grand lady."

Ernestine laughed now.

"There's nobody like mamma for managing every one," she admitted.

They came to the Sun offices, and as they went in through the squirrel cage, the rhythmic crash of great presses came muffled to Ernestine's ears. Will took her over the whole place.

"Upstairs and downstairs, and in my lady's chamber," he said.

In the syndicate rooms he introduced her to half a dozen young men who were much impressed with her youth and beauty. He showed her the stool he sat on, the work on his board.

Mr. Poole came out and shook hands with her, and she was conscious of disappointment. He was a huge, untidy old man, with fat cheeks that had fallen a little, and a shiny bald head. But his eyes were intelligent, his voice was very kind. She felt that she might like him, if she could only know him.

Will's vanity seemed excessive. Although she knew he was proud to show her, he was none the less proud of himself. But it was like the vanity of a capable child, not at all displeasing. Not until they got into the street again did Ernestine realize that they had walked all over the big plant with their fingers interlaced. But she clung to him now shamelessly. He was such an old friend. She was filled with strong reluctance that this vivid hour should end.

He said goodby at the bus, without mentioning another meeting. Ernestine could not let it go at that.

"But you must come to see me," she said, as the conductor waited impatiently for her to board the bus. "I want to see you again, Will."

"Sure," he said vaguely. His mind had already gone back to work "Sure. Call me up some day."

Ernestine went quickly along Her feet were dancing, and her heart was dancing, too. She was extraordinarily happy and full of life. If only such an encounter could be a daily occurrence!

Some one was standing on their doorstep, watching her, waiting for her. She ran up the steps, and Loring Hamilton was there, big and fair and handsome, in his dark coat, with the fur collar.

"Hello, Lorrie. Have to rush in. I'm late. Are you just leaving?"

Sacred Chinese Temple Taken Over by Bandits

Mount Lushan, one of the twelve sacred mountains of China, famed alike for the piety of its monks and for the beauty of its scenery, has been entirely pre-empted by bandits. The once sacred grottos, formerly given over to the contemplation of immense carved images of Buddha, or to the rites of Taoist priests, are now used as prisons. Ancient Chinese writings declare that Mount Dushan was "10 miles high and 240 miles in circumference." Today Lushan rises only a little more than 4,000 feet, but it affords an unsurpased view southward over the gulf of Pechili and eastward toward the Liaotung peninsula, on which the Russians built Port Arthur and on which the Japanese now occupy Dairen. Lushan is very rugged, and in olden times every cliff was ornamented with a temple. Yehlituyu, the famous Chitan who rose to power under Genghis Khan, was an especial devotee of Luskan and legends have it that he selected this mountain to be "the eternal trustee of wisdom." Accordingly he is supposed to have buried 10,000 sacred books in a cavern under the peak of the mountain, and then to have erected over his repository the temple which today is a bleak ruin.

Oddities of Etiquette

Etiquette in Scandinavia is a thing to be dreaded, especially in Sweden. Even the former should address a person by his full diplomatic, political, professional or commercial title. Thus one meets Mr. the Assistant to the Bank Manager Wirseen or Mr. the former Manufacturer of Blood Sausage Olson. Denmark is far less formal, both in speech and attire, but at the end of the dinner party the hostess will stand in the doorway and shake hands with every guest while he murmurs, "Thank you for the food," to which she answers, "I hope it will become you well."

Paper Barometer

Henley's Twentieth Century Book of Recipes publishes the following method of making a paper barometer: Saturate white blotting paper with the following liquid and then hang up to dry:

Cobalt chloride, 1 ounce; sodium chloride, ½ ounce; calcium chloride, 75 grains; acacia, ¼ ounce; water 3 ounces.

The amount of moisture in the air is roughly indicated by the changing color of the paper, rose red indicating rain; pale red, very moist; bluish red, moist; lavender blue, nearly dry; blue, very dry.

Liberty Can Shelter Many

Fifteen or twenty persons can stand on the inside platform in the head of the Statue of Liberty and about the same number three steps lower, but the latter group does not have a satisfactory view.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

New construction work, totaling $180,000, will be undertaken within the next few months by the government at the Monterey Presidio, it was announced by Colonel J. L. Topham, post quartermaster.

Building activities for San Anselmo during the month of May totaled $16,750, it was reported to the city council by Charles H. Cartwright, building inspector. Building fees amounted to $74.50.

The entire beach front is now under control of the City of Santa Cruz by a decision of Superior Judge H. P. Lucas. The city was given immediate and absolute possession of Santa Cruz beach for amusement and other purposes.

Oiling of the Reno-Susanville highway between Johnstonville and Milford has begun. This is the second operation on the road during the past month. Efforts are being extended by local organizations to secure a permanent highway between the Nevada line and Milford.

Showing an increase of $35,918 over the appropriation for the current year, the 1930-31 budget of the Fresno City Board of Education, totaling $1,562,794, has been adopted. The increase was held necessary due to the expected increase of 350 students in th junior high schools, high schools and junior college of the city. A $15,000 increase was allotted the Fresno Junior College.

The California State Chamber of Commerce will help Marysville lay out its new airport, the site of which was donated by the heirs of Heiman Cheim. Dan E. Bryant, councilman, received word from William Boucher, secretary of the Sacramento Valley Council of the Chamber, that airport experts would survey the site.

Pedro Banderos, wandering pastor, and a little crew of Mexicans are now employed in building a church of adobe at San Jose in the manner employed by mission fathers hundreds of years ago. The builders work without pay, and Banderos declares that his church, the Asamblea Apostolican de la Fe en Cristo Jesus, has adobe missions in Los Angeles, Bakersfield, San Bernardino, Tulare and other cities.

Oakdale Irrigation District recently received a check for $32,343.75 from the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., this being the semi-annual payment for the Melones bonds. The money is used to apply on the interest on the Melones bond issue and the first of the bonds to be paid off as they fall due. Similar payment was made to the South San Joaquin irrigation district.

The "crookedest railroad in the world," the Mount Tamalpais & Muir Woods road, wants to quit, tear up its track, and surrender its franchises. The State Railroad Commission had its petition to do so.

Quaint, worm geared locomotives, antique cars and some 287 dizzy curves during the ascent of the mountain gave the railroad its claim to distinction during its more than thirty years.

Work of oiling the Red Bluff-Susanville highway between Dales, fourteen miles east of Red Bluff, and Coppervale, in Plumas County, is now going on under the direction of Elmer L. Stump, resident engineer of the State Highway Commission. Only one side of the road will be oiled at a time, and the work will stop over Saturdays and Sundays.

With the assistance of twenty-seven counties pledged with appropriations totaling $115,000, the State Board of Forestry announced the State is prepared to wage the most effective fight against summer forest, brush and grain fires in the State's history. Counties that have signed co-operative fire fighting agreements are: San Diego, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Fresno, Orange, Calaveras, Tuolumne, Shasta, Siskiyou, Tehama, Solano, Colusa, Madera, Kern, Riverside, San Luis Obispo, San Benito, Yuba, Tulare,, Sonoma, Lake Humboldt Mendocino, Butte, Lassen and Nevada. In addition to these, four counties—Placer, Amador, Eldorado, and Trinity—have forest rangers but no agreement with the State. However, these counties will participate in a voluntary co-operative program.

Carved into the sills and walls of an old miner's cabin which is the Cat Creek ranger station of Eldorado National Forest, far up on the slopes of the Sierra, are many names and initials. Some are those of men who have gone far in the United States forest service. Perhaps the name best known of any is that of a young man named Roy Reigels—'29 football captain at California—who was a forest service worker and cruised the Caldor country in 1924.

BURNING UP MILLIONS

During May the total fire loss was $38,415,142, being $6,285,734 more than in May, 1929. The total for the first five months of this year is estimated to be above $210,521,000, which corresponds with $796,487,000 for the same period last year. If the present trend continues, the 1930 waste will exceed that of 1929 by more than $30,000,000.

When, over a two year period, appreciable declines in our fire loss were recorded, it was believed that America was at last becoming "fire conscious." Apparently this optimism was not justified. We are again on our way toward a new record.

We can not plead ignorance. Various public and private organizations have worked intensively to show us the danger of fire and how to prevent it. Each year we have a nationally-observed Fire Prevention week. There is only one sound reason for the gigantic waste—carelessness.

We put off wiring inspection; we drop tobacco and matches wherever we happen to finish with them; we lazily leave piles of trash in corners of garages and basements.

We do everything that may cause fire, and almost nothing to prevent it. It is only natural that our annual waste should be the greatest in the world.

Every year the American people contribute about $500,000,000 to fire waste. It is destroyed just as thoroughly as if we threw currency in the stove. That is worth thinking about.

One consolation is that any change in economic conditions will probably be for the better.

We might beat the sugar tariff by stirring the ice tea more thoroughly.

WOLFE AND MONTCALM

That "time dissolves all things," as Aristotle declared many centuries ago, was illustrated by a pleasing ceremony at Greenwich, England, recently, in which a descendant of the French General Montcalm unveiled a state of the English General Wolfe.

Montcalm and Wolfe were the opposing commanders in the battle of Quebec, on September 13, 1759, in which both were killed. But the English under Wolfe were the victors, and, by the surrender of Quebec, Canada was forever lost to the French.

Wolfe's victory was the result of one of the most brilliant and daring pieces of strategy in the annals of warfare. After being repulsed in an assault on Quebec from the front Wolfe silently descended the St. Lawrence river in boats at night and led his army up supposedly unsurmountable cliffs in the rear of the city. The next morning he was able to attack the unprotected rear of the French position.

He was greatly outnumbered by the enemy, so he ordered his men to withhold their fire until within 30 yards of the French. Then, with crushing volleys, followed by a determined bayonet charge, he won his famous victory.

Leading the final charge in person, Wolfe was wounded twice, but pressed on until a third shot pierced his breast. While in the throes of mortal agony he was informed that the French had given way. He directed that a regiment be dispatched to cut off their retreat and said: "Now, God be praised, I will die in peace."

Montcalm, equally brave and determined, recived a mortal wound about the same time.

Now, 171 years later, a Montcalm pays homage to the valor of a Wolfe. Truly time dissolves all things.

Western Electric SOUND SYSTEM — THE VOICE OF ACTION

31,000 LIVES—$850,000,000

It is estimated that motor vehicle accidents in the United States during the past year resulted in an economic los of $850,000,000. This is the price we pay for carelessness and incompetence. Yet it is the least important phase of the problem. Of infinitely greater importance is the fact that in 1929 the automobile claimed about 31,000 lives.

Every year hundreds of thousands of new automobiles throng the highways. Utilization of the average car is continually on the increase. Traffic congestion grows more severe. Speed ranges rise. Yet, for the most part, we are attempting to handle these conditions with outmoded laws.

It has been stated that the greatest single accident prevention need is a driver's license law. So far seventeen states have passed such ordinances—including the state of California. In the other thirty-one, persons are allowed to operate high-powered vehicles on public roads irrespective of their competence, thus endangering all motorists and pedestrians.

It is too late to save the 31,000 lives that were lost last year, and the 28,000 the year before. We can not replace the wasted $850,000,000. But we can halt the rising death and injury toll caused by reckless and incompetent drivers.

A HERO OF PEACE

It is gratifying to humane persons to note that in recent years the reading public has shown increasing interest in the lives and works of those who have wrought for the alleviation of misery and suffering, wherever found. Heroes of peace have come to be esteemed no less than those of war.

This is illustrated by the enthusiastic reception accorded a recent autobiography of Dr. Axel Munthe, world-famous Swedish physician, whose long life of unselfish service is the subject of a most fascinating and inspiring narrative. Added interest is given by the fact that not only human beings, but beasts and birds as well, have been the objects of his humane ministrations.

Among his patients have been the late Queen Victoria of Sweden, American millionaires sojourning in Paris and Rome, poverty-stricken cholera victims in Naples, and a dying gorilla in a zoo in Paris.

He also found time to wage a successful crusade against the century-old cruel business of netting birds on the Island of Capri.

It is well that Dr. Munthe has seen fit to recount many incidents of his busy and useful life in his charming book, "The Story of San Michele." It is also pleasing to know that in a recent letter to Duttons, his American publishers, he has directed that all his royalties from the book be devoted to a fund for the protection of animals and migratory birds.

The life story of this hero of peace is as full of thrills and inspiration as that of Alexander or Napoleon. Contrasted with the record of those men of ambition, it shows humanity at its best.

LOOK FORWARD

It is time to stop looking backward. It is time to look beyond the conditions of the present moment. This country's prospects are far more discouraging. The downward trend in commodity prices is general throughout the world. Labor is as well employed here as in any other industrial country, with the exception of France. And wage rates here are higher than anywhere else in the world. Money and capital are far more plentiful here than in other lands. We are not on an inflated basis. Overproduction has been brought under control in nearly every industry. Inventories are light rather than heavy. The rigidly restricted buying of the last eight months means that in millions of homes things have been wearing out faster than they have been replenished. A respite from political uncertainty is at hand. Stock prices cannot and will not forever move downward. Some day pessimism will give way to optimism. Such a change may reasonably be looked for before the end of this year. Our mental state is worse than our material state. Buck up!—Forbes Magazine.

CRIPPLE WINS DEGREE

Among the season's college graduates none is more interesting or deserving than Richard Mahoney, who has just received his A. B. degree at Clark University, in Massachusetts.

Mahoney was stricken with infantile paralysis when he was four years old. He has not been able to use his arms or legs since, but has developed remarkable facility in the use of his neck muscles. He writes with a pen or pencil between his teeth, and runs a typewriter by punching the keys with a stick held in his mouth.

His great physical misfortune has never daunted his ambitious spirit, and he was voted the best-natured man in his class. He expects to continue his studies and win his master's degree next year.

Mahoney's ambition is to become a writer, and the courage and determination he has already shown will stand him in good stead in his effort to win fame and fortune as a man of letters.

SEA SCOUT SIPLE

One of the most attractive personalities in the Byrd expedition, which recently received a royal welcome upon its return from the Antarctic, in Sea Scout Paul A. Siple of Erie, Pa., who was selected from all the Boy Scouts in the country to accompany the explorer to the far South.

From reports on Siple's conduct during the long absence from civiliation it appears that his selection for this honor was well-merited. Shortly before the expedition set sail for home, Admiral Byrd gave a radio talk in which the young Scout's activities were featured. The admiral said:

"Sea Scout Paul A. Siple took up his work in the expedition as a man among men. He stood regular deck watches on shipboard and turned himself into an able seaman on a full-rigged sailing vessel. At the base he was given a dog team to drive and soon learned to handle the dogs like a sourdough. Paul was given the young pups to train and turned out a most useful team. As zoologist he got many specimens of Antarctic bird and animal life. He also did good work in taking depth soundings in the Bay of Whales. Along with the rest, he has taken his turn at menial tasks, such as shoveling snow, house duties, kitchen police and standing night watches."

Every Boy Scout should be proud of the accomplishments of their representative in this greatest adventure in which an American boy has ever participated.

MODESTY OF THE GREAT

It is generally taken for granted that between rival artists in the same line of work there exists a high degree of professional jealousy. Therefore it is refreshing to note the mutual admiration of two of the world's outstanding tenors, as well as their extreme modesty.

John McCormack, the famous Irish singer, who became a naturalized American citizen in 1919, once objected to being advertised as "the world's greatest tenor." He said:

"I am not the greatest tenor in the world. I object to that title. The greatest tenor (Caruso) is dead, and the next has not arrived."

An interviewer asked who he considered greater than himself, to which McCormack promptly replied:

"The Canadian singer, Edward Johnson, is the best all around operatic tenor in the world and in addition he has a perfect figure which so few tenors possess."

And when McCormack's compliment was conveyed to Johnson, that fine artist returned it by saying: "As coming from one tenor to another, I should say it was the acme of generosity. Further, although startled by its pleasing flattery, I must say that his expression is exactly my feeling for John, a great artist and a kindly friend."

The truly great, even in the artistic world, are usually considerate and modest.

UNEMPLOYMENT PLAN

Widespread unemployment, caused partly by generally unsatisfactory economic conditions throughout the world and partly by the replacement of hand labor by machines, is giving industrialists as well as the unemployed grave concern.

Some manufacturers already have adopted forms of unemployment insurance, whereby workers temporarily laid off receive stated amounts during the period of enforced idleness.

A plan which is attracting much attention just now is that offered by the General Electric Company to its employees, whereby they would contribute one per cent of their wages to the insurance fund, the company to contribute an equal amount.

Employees would contribute so long as they were earning 50 per cent or more of average full time wages. When laid off they would receive 50 per cent of the wage earned when working. The company would hold the insurance fund in trust, paying five per cent interest on the money so held.

New rules for the better regulation of employment have been established by the company, the idea being to distribute the work among the employees under various conditions in such manner as to avoid lay-offs as much as possible.

MAGNANIMOUS

The defendant was charged with murder in the first degree. He had been tried and convicted by a jury of twelve men. As provided under the laws of the state of New Mexico, the jury was polled. Of the dozen citizens composing the august body only one had a knowledge of the English language. He had been elected foreman.

To the question: "Is this your individual verdict?" the foreman's reply was an emphatic "Yes, SIR." The eleven others, upon being asked the same question, said "Si, Senor." Immediately after the last "Si, Senor" had been recorded the foreman arose and addressed the Judge. "In the interests of harmony," said the foreman, "and to make this verdict unanimous, I desire to change my vote from 'Yes, Sir' to 'Si, Senor.'"—Forbes Magazine.

"Eliza," said a friend of the family to the old colored washerwoman, "have you seen Miss Edith's fiance?"

"No, ma'am," she answered. "It ain't been in the wash yet."—Jack-o-Lantern.

"My wife says if I don't chuck golf, she'll leave me."

"I say—hard luck."

"Ye-es. I'll miss her."—London Opinion.

"Joe has a glass eye."

"Did he tell you that?"

"No, it just came out in the conversation."—The Wampus.

"You've been convicted fourteen times of this offense—ain't you ashamed to own to that?"

"No, your worship. I don't think one ought to be ashamed of his convictions."—Montreal Star.

COLMA WILL SEEK WATER DISTRICT

Formation of a new water district is being urged by residents of Colma following the $100,000 blaze which destroyed the American Box factory and a private home near the Southern Pacific depot last Sunday night.

The fire, which started from unknown causes in a room full of electric fuses in the box factory, gained headway so rapidly that the entire Colma and South San Francisco fire departments and two chemical companies from San Francisco were powerless to do anything but keep the fire from spreading.

Colma gets its domestic water supply from the Spring Valley system, but there are no fire mains. Water was obtained from Daly City's reservoirs during the fire of Sunday night.

SIR CONAN DOYLE PASSES FROM A HEART ATTACK

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, noted novelist and spiritualist and creator of the world-famous Sherlock Holmes, died in London last Monday at the age of 71. Sir Arthur's death resulted from a heart attack. It was the generally weakening condition of his heart which necessitated the trip abroad in an effort to revive his failing health, and, although no great improvement had been shown within the past few months, his death was unexpected.

AT THE PRIMARY ELECTION, August 26, 1930

JURY RECOMMENDS WOMAN'S ARREST

Mrs. Minnie Roderick should be charged with the "well murder" of her husband, Frank Roderick, and held until she proves her innocence, it was recommended by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the La Honda man's death, conducted at Redwood City last Tuesday by Coroner J. C. McGovern.

The jury also recommended that Ernest Hillebrand, a neighboring rancher, against whom a murder charge had been dismissed on Monday, be held as a material witness.

The jury's verdict and recommendation was as follows:

"Roderick came to his death from a gunshot wound through the head, by a party or parties undetermined.

"Jury recommends that Mrs. Roderick be taken into custody and detained until by fair trial she proves her innocence of any part in crime.

"Also that Hillebrand be held as a material witness."

The recommendation came after Hillebrand had testified to hearing a death threat made by Mrs. Roderick against her husband.

SPLENDID PROGRAM AT CAVARY BAPTIST CHAPEL

At the 9:45 hour next Sunday at the Calvary Baptist Chapel, a remarkable film will be shown, titled "Transportation." In outline it deals with Sioux Indians; covered wagon train; pack train; horse car; early steam locomotive; James Watt's engine; modern locomitive compared to old; wood-burning steamer compared with oil burner; the automobile; principle of the gas engine; airplane engine; tri-motor plane.

The sermon topic for the morning will be "Perishable Humanity." There will be no B. Y. P. U. or evening service Sunday night, due to the B. Y. P. U. convention of America. This convention is meeting in the Exposition Auditorium, Civic Center. There will be two outstanding addresses in the afternoon and evening. "How Does Christ Expect Me to Follow Him" will be the message by Dr. Howard A. Vernon. Dr. Vernon is the pastor of Judson Memorial Baptist church, Minneapolis, Minnesota. At the 8:30 hour Dr. W. P. Dearing, president of the Ookland City College, Indiana, will speak on "What May I Expect in the Way of Results." There will be something going on from 2:45 through 9:15 P. M. As much as possible the congregation of Calvary Baptist Chapel will attend the convention in a body Sunday afternoon and evening. The convention should be of interest not only to the Baptist young people but the young people of all congregatins and creeds, for this covention is bringing speakers of prominence from all over the states.

During the vacation period of the pastor, Calvary Chapel is to enjoy hearing the following good speakers from its pulpit:

On July 20, Dr. E. M. Batcher will occupy the pulpit both morning and evening. He will also speak the evening of August 3. Dr. Bratcher is the Professor of Old Testament Interpretation, Berkeley Baptist Divinity. He holds his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Brown University.

Dr. Stacey R. Warburton will occupy the pulpit both morning and evening July 27. Dr. Warburton is Professor of Christian Missions in the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School. He holds his Doctor of Divinity from the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School.

The pulpit guest for the morning of August 3 will be Mr. Pedro Cabalfin Robles, M. A. Mr. Robles is a Linfield College graduate and recently finished a very outstanding piece of research work, which was developed into his M. A. thesis, titled "The Religion of the Adolescent."

Under the excellent leadership of Miss Madie Irons, director of music at the Chapel, inspiring numbers in music will be rendered in connection with these services.

The L. D. S. Relief Society held a very successful work and business meeting last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. T. E. Williams, of Marston avenue, where eleven of the members assembled. They quilted a very beautiful quilt. A delicious luncheon was served, after which the meeting was called to order and the regular busines was transacted. Plans were made for an outing to be held at Fleshacker Park on August 5. The next meeting will be held on August 12, in the George Washington Masonic Temple.

Areta Jones, of Fairbury, Neb., won the loving cup offered for the best news writer among the 4-H club boys and girls of the state by J. P. O'Furey, publisher of the Hartington News.

FAMOUS NAGS ENTER SAN JOAQUIN RACES

Entries of the famous pacing and troting horses of the Coast, all of whom have been winners in recent western races, have been entered in the San Jaquin County Fair program, to be given in Stockton August 18 to 24, racing officials announced yesterday.

A field of the best horses that have yet come together in the west will be be seen in the troting event, Wednesday, August 20. They include such stars as Hollyrood Pat, Harry I, Senator Perkins, Guy Aubrey, and Radium Dalloh. These horses have all been winners in many races.

California's favorite pacer, Colonel Pointer, is an important entry in the pacing event on August 21. Others in this event include Al Volo and Garnet C from Denver; Hal J. Logan, Double G, Teddy Junior, Jovita Logan and Nonbells Dillon. With the exception of the two Denver horses, other pacers have all won on the Stockton track.

ENFORCEMENT OF GRADE CROSSING SAFETY RULES

"Obey grade crossing signals for your protection."

This is the slogan for the July campaign of the California Committee on Public Safety, state-wide organization of authorities and agencies interested in reducing traffic risks and accidents.

With the completion this week of the educational campaign for the motoring public on the provisions of the law and the dictates of common sense that apply to driving across grade crossings, the period of strict enforcement begins, it is announced by Senator Arthur H. Breed, chairman of the committee.

The committee is engaged in a year-round campaign which stresses one common hazard each month. It has the co-operation of traffic law enforcement agencies, both state and local. Superintendent Eugene Biscailuz of the California Highway Patrol has issued orders to state traffic police to begin enforcement of the law in respect to grade crossings. For all motorists this means stopping at grade crossings where signals are given by flagmen or automatic devices. For common carrier buses, school buses and trucks carrying explosives or inflammable liquids it means stopping at all grade crossings.

Police chiefs in all major cities are also co-operating with the committee and have issued similar enforcement orders.

Motorists are urged to watch for and obey railway stop signals. It always is a wise idea to slow down and look both ways before crossing a railroad track. Motorists for their own protection should observe and obey grade crossing signals. Wigwags and automatic signals have been placed at practically all hazardous crossings in California, so that the motorist who drives with care need not run afoul of railroad trains.

TREMENDOUS INCREASE IN TELEPHONE CALLS

The growing importance of Pacific Coast business and social relationships in American life is reflected in figures given out by L. M. Brown, manager for the Telephone Company, showing that transcontinental telephone calls to California in the six years, 1924-29, increased over 400 per cent.

In 1924 inter-city telephone calls between New York and Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles totaled 15,000. In 1929 this total was more than 75,000.

The greatest increase in the transcontinental calls came in the past three years, 1927, 1928, and 1929. The calls per year since 1923 were as follows: 1924, 15,000; 1925, 20,000; 1926, 25,000; 1927, 38,000; 1928, 65,000. In 1929 the total is estimated to have exceeded 75,000.

Telephone calls across the continent use wires of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. to and from the Utah and Arizona boundaries. The Pacific Company is now the western terminal of four transcontinental wire routs in California and five in all on the coast. These are hooked up with the lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company from the east at the Utah and Arizona borders.

The figures given out also show that the speed with which long distance messages are handled has been increased in recent years. The average time required from the placing of a long distance call to the response of the called party, or until a definite report is made by the operator, has been reduced from 7 minutes in 1920 to 2 minutes in 1926 and about 1 minute in 1929.

More than 95 per cent of the total long distance calls are completed, or reported upon, while the subscriber remains at the telephone, without requiring him to hang up and be called again.

NEW MARIN HIGHWAY PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

While construction on the new highway between Alto, Marin county, and San Rafael is progressing satisfactorily, it is still impossible to set a definite date of completion, is the information received by the National Automobile Club from the Department of Public Works.

Work is progressing rapidly on the bridges and over-passes, and the contracts have just been let for the surfacing of the road.

This is one of the important steps in the improvement of the Redwood Highway, as it will very materially decrease the driving time between Sausalito and San Rafael. The new road eliminates slow driving through the numerous towns in Marin county and also does away with the old Corte Madera grade.

This combined with the straightening of the road north of San Rafael, and the extensiev construction now under way between Ignacio and Petaluma, will provide a spledid concrete highway over which excellent time can be made.

HOME—

The people in a progressive, healthy and happy community must, above all things, be well housed.

The kind of houses in which we live and the shape in which we keep them tell what kind of a people we are.

Your residence—where you live—is one of the most important facts about you. Truly, "as your house, so are you."

Homes cover a wide range of individual wealth and taste. They are an evidence of both.

A home should be the best a family can possibly afford.

The interior of the home is as important as the exterior. Authorities tell us that the minimum standard for each house is:

1—At least one room per person.
2—No dark rooms.
3—A heating system.
4—A lighting system.
5—Hot and cold running water.
6—Toilet and bath.
7—Screens.

The art of good housekeeping is today far more simple than ever before. From back door to front, from roof to cellar, there are available modern, labor-saving and comfort producing devices and products within the reach of all.

Comfortable furniture, such as chairs, davenports and beds that economize space, invite rest and make the home more attractive and more livable.

Hangings, decorations, curtains, pictures and rugs, lend warmth and color to the rooms. Modern lighting fixtures and lamps not only add to a room's attractiveness but also eliminate the danger of eye strain. Present day heating equipment makes not only for greater heating efficiency and economy, but also increases comfort in the home by supplying moist air and the proper indoor temperature during even the coldest periods.

For the household that handles its laundry work in the home, modern laundry equipment not only relieves the home manager of irksome toil, but also cleanses more thoroughly and efficiently.

The greatly improved kitchen stoves and appliances now available eliminate drudgery and worry of working.

Just as modern mechanical equipment has served to make industry more efficient, modern household appliances not only save hours of the busy house-wife's time, but make home-keeping a more pleasant and happy task. With modern housekeeping equipment house cleaning is no longer a seasonal activity, but a weekly one. The result is a healthier, happier and more comfortable home.

Our interest in the welfare of this community prompts us to sponsor this message to the people of

COLORS REVERSED ON THE 1931 PLATES

The 1931 colors for automobile license plates will be exactly the same as this year except that they will be reversed, the Division of Motor Vehicles announced today.

Instead of black letters and numerals on an orange background, it was stated, orange letters will appear on a black background, just as they were in 1929.

Exhaustive tests for visibility, the Division's announcement said, have proven beyond all doubt that these colors are the most satisfactory and the numbers may be read at a greater distance than with any other combination.

The only change in the general appearance of next year's plate will be the elimination of the dashes between numerals and letters. This will be done to improve the plate's appearance and will not decrease visibility.

The plates will be 13 7-8 inches long and 6 1-8 inches wide, as provided by the motor vehicle act. They will be manufactured of the same grade of 24-gauge steel.

The same combination of letters and numerals that has proven so satisfactory in the last two years will be used. The Division announced that a maximum of 2,070,000 plates of not more than six characters may be issued with this arrangement.

An initial order for 1,980,000 pleasure car plates has been placed. The plates will be manufactured by the Kittle Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles at a price of 13 cents per pair.

Plate assignments are now being prepared for the various branch offices of the Division.

NATURAL GAS LINE UNDER WAY IN REDWOOD EMPIRE

Construction of a pipeline that will supply natural gas to the communities of Napa, Sonoma and Marin counties has commenced on a schedule which calls for completion in ninety days. The project represents an investment of $772,427 and is giving employment to approximately 200 workers. Local men are employed wherever practicable.

This transmission system for the North Bay communities taps the main line from Kettleman Hills at Crockett, the first unit running across Carquinez bridge and into Vallejo. From Vallejo a 35-mile main will extend to Petaluma there to tie with the network that now distributes manufactured gas to a score of cities from Sausalito to Healdsburg.

Extensions will serve the new fuel to many sections that hitherto have not had gas of any kind. This work will require an additional investment of $350,000. One branch will supply Healdsburg, Windsor, Fulton and intervening districts. Another will serve St. Helena, Calistoga, Yountville and adjacent communities. A third will run to the pioneer town of Sonoma, Boyes Springs and neighboring resorts.

FAY BAINTER AT THE GEARY IN THE COMEDY "CAPRICE"

Fay Bainter, the brilliant young American star, who will be seen at the Geary Theatre for a limited engagement beginning Monday, July 14, in the delightfully daring Viennese comedy, "Caprice," with Reginald Owen and Lily Cahill, has a number of conspicuous successes to her credit. "East is West" ran for more than two years in New York, and nearly that long on the road. On a dare, before she appeared in "East is West," she went into musical comedy in "The Dream Girl," and played that for nearly eighty weeks. Last season she played in "Jealousy," which played the Geary a year ago, and at the end of fifty-six weeks had to request the management to close the show as the unique two-character play was too much of a strain on her nerves.

In "Caprice" Miss Bainter is said to have a role exactly suited to her vital personality and vivacious temperament. It is a comedy of the highest order. This sophisticated play, centering about a man who loves and is loved by many women, is accounted to be the greatest comedy success ever produced by the noted New York Theatre Guild. It ran a year on Broadway and later the company was sent to London.

Featured in Miss Bainter's supporting company are Reginald Owen, a famous English comedian, and Miss Lily Cahill, of the Theatre Guild, and who will be seen in her original role. The cast is hailed as being without exception one of the finest offered in San Francisco in recent years. Other members of the company are Gladys McConnell, David Scott, Frederick Sullivan, Alice Parks and Lucian Self. The scenes of "Caprice" are laid in gay Vienna, and the production was staged for Belasco and Curran by A. Leslie Pearce.

Mines in Alaska produced $16,066,000 worth of minerals in 1929, as against $14,061,000 in 1928, according to an aonnouncement made by the Interior Department through the Geological Survey. The total value of the mineral output of the Territory since 1880 is $615,501,000.

OLD-TIME FIGHTERS

Discussions of the latest prize-fight fiasco, in which the German Schmelling won the technical world's championship over Sharkey on a foul, have renewed speculation as to how John L. Sullivan and other battlers of old would have stacked up against our modern pugs.

No one can tell, of course, but when it is remembered, for instance, that Sullivan and Kilrain fought 75 rounds with bare knuckles in the last championship bout under London prize ring rules, the stamina of these old timers can not be discounted. That was in 1889, since which time gloves have been used, and no championship bout has gone longer than 26 rounds under the new rules.

Under the old London bare-knuckle rules a round did not end until one of the fighters was on the ground. Then after only 30 seconds rest they went at it again.

As Jack Dempsey recently pointed out, while Sullivan was defeated by Corbett, using larger gloves, Sullivan went to his grave as the undefeated bare-knuckle champion.

Considering the unsatisfactory termination of many recent championship bouts, it is strange that the boxing game has held its customers as well as it has. But if promoters and fighters do not soon begin to stage better exhibitions than have been witnessed during the past few years, it will not be surprising if the fans get tired of being humbugged. There is no doubt that the old-timers put on much better shows for a fraction of the present-day prices.

PROBERS LOOK SILLY

To the casual observer it would appear that the Senate's lobby investigating committee, which shut up shop last week, has been made rather ridiculous by several persons whose activities it sought to investigate.

Among those who figuratively tweaked the noses of the stern investigators were William B. Shearer, alleged big Navy lobbyist; Mrs. Gladys Moon Jones, reputed supporter of certain tariff doctrines, and Bishop Cannon.

Shearer so completely dominated the proceedings incident to his questioning that the investigators dropped him like the proverbial hot potato when he stood his ground and told hem where to "head in."

Mrs. Jones also refused to be bullied, and told the committee that her sponsors paid their money for their own show, while their opponents elected their lobbyists to the Senate.

Bishop Cannon answered the questions he wanted to answer; refused to answer the others, and walked out on the investigators, virtually daring them to prosecute him for contempt. And they didn't prosecute.

So, like most Senatorial investigators, the lobby probers accomplished little, except to incur an expense bill for the taxpayers to settle. And incidentally succeeeded in making themselves look silly.

COURT REFORM NEEDED

To the average intelligent layman, the rules of procedure in American courts are so antiquated as to be positively humorous, were it not for the distressing fact that we are largely governed by them, it is asserted by the St. Louis Star.

As the St. Louis Star so aptly says: "Our absurd rules of evidence, our decisions on technicalities, slow down and pervert justice, and foster crimes and lawlessness."

Consequently there is lack of respect for courts and for law itself. Most people believe, and not without reason, that lawsuits necessarily involve trickery and sharp practices on the part of lawyers. Even the bench is not always exempt from suspicion of deciding cases on technicalities rather than upon facts and a desire for meting out even-handed justice. Continuing, the Star says:

"What about these pleadings that ramble on for thousands of words, wherein every point must be stated just so, or the case is thrown out of court? Are they necessary? In England, after the great law reform of 1873, a rule was adopted that no case should be thrown out of court for any alleged 'want of form' in a pleading. The result was that English pleadings, once thousands of words long, now take up about a dozen lines in the plainest of plain English. Pleadings as we know them have disappeared from the practice of law in England. The result is that all English lawsuits reach a final decision in from two weeks to four months. There is confidence in the courts, and the judges have time to attend to criminals in the same speedy fashion."

In the light of these facts it is not unreasonable to suggest that the defective administration of justice is perhaps the deepest and most fundamental evil which now confronts the people of the United States.

Militarists of all the powers are dissatisfied with the London treaty, so it must be an eminently fair arrangement.

Miss Jeanne Livingston of Wyoming and Mrs. Afton Seal of Ohio are the only practicing oil geologists in the United States, and perhaps in the world.

AUTOMOBILES AND THE WORLD WAR

The annual death rate due to the automobile, according to Robert Lamont, Secretary of oCmmerce, is now close to the total American casualties in the World war.

Fatalities have increased from 12,500 in 1920, to 31,000 in 1929. And while in 1926 there were 107 deaths for each 100,000 cars in use, last year the rate was 117.

The rising toll has been blamed on such factors as the increased utilization of the average motor car and the high speeds at which it is driven. These have undoubtedly had some effect. But of far greater importance is the general disregard of traffic regulations and the fact that most of our states are now attempting to control 1930 conditions with 1915 laws.

Only 17 states require examination of drivers. The other 31 allow persons to use the public highways irrespective of their competence and responsibility. Almost no states have modernized, adequate and rigidly enforced traffic codes. Last year a few cities, such as San Francisco, St. Louis and Chicago, recorded decreases in their automobile accident records through concentrated attention to traffic problems.

That the rising death and injury rate caused by automobiles is one of the gravest of our national problems goes without saying. It is the opinion of experts that improvement in the situation will only come when every state requires examination of drivers, keeps the reckless and incompetent from using the public highways and rigidly enforcces traffic codes in keeping with modern conditions.

SOLVING THE GRADE CROSSING PROBLEM

In spite of the fact that we have been spending more than $60,000,000 a year to eliminate railroad grade crosings, they are increasing in number due to new road construction, according to reports presented to the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

It is stated that the cost of grade separation is too great for the problem to be solved by this method and it is suggested that uniform warning signs, protective signal devices and education of users of the highway provide most practicable remedies.

At every grade crossing is some sort of sign or warning on the railroad right-of-way. It should be a simple matter for states and the railroads to agree on an outstanding type of sign or signal device which would be noticed by even the most negligent of drivers, and place it far enough from the crossing to give adequate time for cautious approach.

The desire to beat the railroad train to the crossing is responsible for the loss of thousands of lives. Plain ordinary carelessness and incompetence are responsible for thousands of more. The most telling commentary of all is found in the fact that a large part of grade crossing accidents result, not when trains strike motor cars, but when motor cars strike trains!

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Edwards' Drug Store, Mission street, near San Jose avenue. —Adv.

The Tone Selector is Radio's Newest Development!

Let us demonstrate the many advantages of this remarkable feature of the new General Motors Radio

Formerly, radio had but one tone. And you had to accept it for every type of broadcast program . . . Then General Motors introduced the Tone Selector and made it possible for you to emphasize bass and treble at will. Now, simply with the turn of a knob you can find the exact shade of musical expression you most enjoy—for every kind of vocal and instrumental selection that goes on the air!

There is such a variety of delightful entertainment being broadcast nowadays that complete enjoyment of radio demands this new selection of tone. You cannot realize what an improvement the Tone Selector makes in reception until you actually hear it in operation. Come in today and try the Tone Selector for yourself. Let us give you a complete demonstration of the new General Motors Radio so that you can appreciate how thoroughly fine these modern sets are.

You will be as impressed by the beautiful cabinets of the new General Motors Radio as you are by its exceptional performance. The five handsome models of radios and radio-phonographs are patterned after five different styles of authentic period furniture. They are not the conventional type of radio cabinet. By all means come in to see these genuinely attractive models and let us explain how, once you buy a General Motors Radio, you may keep the cabinet as long as you like and still enjoy every new development in radio.

Any model may be purchased on the liberal GMAC plan. Radios $136 to $172—radio-phonographs $198 and $270—without tubes.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 3 FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1930 NUMBER 50

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"Dat's a beautiful diamond. What size?"
"It's de twenty-year installment size."

Flubb: "I think I know the Miss Bleacham you spoke of. Her hair is a decided blond type, isn't it?"
Dubb: Well—er—yes, except that it's a little undecided about the roots."

"STERLING," the Wallboard of satisfaction.

"Have you been able to meet all the demands of your creditors?"
"Meet them? I have not been able to avoid them."

It's a wise crack indeed that knows its own originator.

"Just had a tussle with the dentist."
"And who came off best?"
"Well, I guess you would call it a draw."

Yes, we sell Paints and Oils—the Best.

Boss: "What are you two darkies doing walking so slowly up those stairs?"
Midnight: "We is wo'kin', boss. We is carryin' dis heah desk up de stairs."
Boss: "I don't see any desk."
Midnight: "For de land's sake, Carbona, we dun fergit de desk."

"My son has just been graduated from college. What would you advise him to read?"
"The 'Help Wanted' column."

When you are on the level, you are above the average.

Passer-by (to the angler): "How are the fish in this stream?"
Angler: "I really don't know. I have dropped them a line every day this week, but I haven't got any reply yet."

"ABERDEEN" and American Block the Coal that satisfies.

Getting Away From Himself

Patient: "Can you cure me of snoring? I snore so loud, I waken myself."
Doctor: "I advise you then to sleep in another room."
